Between March and early-November 2020, reported cannabis use among US adults increased in the early months of the pandemic but these increases were not sustained. Among those with increased use were adults living in states with only medical cannabis policies, females, non-Hispanic whites, individuals living with a partner and those with an income above the FPL.